Broke Jail.

On last Sunday night D. H. Leida and Alfred Allison made their escape from the jall in this place—they were foolish for staying in as long as they did. The plan they adopted to make their escape was simply to burn out and enlarge the hole that the store pipe passes through from the lower room to the upper; they then made a rope out of some old bed ticking, let themselves down into the lower room, and the door being open, they naturally walked off. Others tears.

Mr. John Williams, living about one By viet and one-half miles northeast of Oregon, had a horse stolen from his stable a few ing on horseback, tied the batter around nights ago, the particulars of which are his wrist to discharge his gue at some as follows: He was aroused in the night game. The horse having taken fright at by the barking of his dog, but did not the discharge of the gun, ran, dragging get up. In the morning he went to the him some distance. When found (the stable early, and found his best horse missing, worth $160. He tracked him a short distance, where he found the horse had endeavored to get clear of his new master by jumping terribly, as the impression made in the ground and their distance apart plainly showed. A fourinch Colt's revolver was picked up. Pursuing the trail it led to Duncan's mill, on the Nodaway; here Mr. Williams found they had been ferried over, and taken a direction to get around Fillmore. Mr. Williams here left the trail and started direct for Savannah. About four miles this side of which place he espled his horse in a lane off the road; went to him, the halter and bridle had been taken off and was found over the fence,inthe lane he thought he saw a man go behind a school house that stood at the crossing of the roads. He made for the school house, and found the thief leaning up against the house.
